ABSTRACT

The comprehensive civil and criminal justice reforms, aiming at improving their efficiency of procedures, were complemented with the adoption of the implementing legislation. The full effect of the reform of the High Council for the Judiciary is being evaluated. The directly applicable provisions of this reform have been put to full use while concerns remain on the parts depending on implementing legislation, which is still to be adopted. The newly established tax courts started functioning, with some challenges regarding their full independence from the executive. Concerns have been raised by some stakeholders on the draft laws regarding the separation of careers of judges and prosecutors and reforming the Prosecution Service. The digitalisation of the justice system has significantly improved while the amended procedural rules allowing the digitalisation in criminal justice remain to be fully implemented. The length of proceedings, while improving, still remains a serious challenge.

The Anti-Corruption Authority approved a new National Anti-Corruption Plan (2023-2025). A draft law was tabled aimed at abrogating the offence of abuse of public office and limiting the scope of the offence of trading in influence. The impact of the criminal justice reform on corruption cases closed after the lapse of two years at appeal level is being monitored. Steps were taken to enhance digitalisation and interconnection of registries as investments in IT tools have increased and financial information is available to law enforcement authorities. Comprehensive legislation on conflicts of interest has not been adopted yet. A parliamentary inquiry on the need to adopt comprehensive rules on lobbying is underway. Hearings in the Senate to address the practice of channelling donations through political foundations and associations have started. The new law on whistleblower protection entered into force covering breaches of both EU and national law. A new public procurement code aimed at simplification and efficiency of procedures has been adopted and will enter into force in July 2023.

The legal framework regulating the media sector is robust and effective while the media regulator is independent and well-resourced. Actions have been taken to alleviate the economic distress in the sector although some improvements are needed to better support small players operating at local or regional level. Access to information is ensured although stakeholders stressed the need to improve its implementation. A legal framework for the protection of journalists is in place, while journalists continue to face different forms of intimidation, such as attacks, threats and harassment, including online. In particular, the increase in the number of strategic lawsuits against public participation targeting journalists is viewed with concern by several stakeholders. A reform of the regime on defamation, the protection of professional secrecy and journalistic sources has been initiated.

Two new draft legislation were tabled, one of which assigns the role of a National Human Rights Institution to the Data Protection Authority, while the other proposes to create a separate entity through a constitutional change. Public consultations in the legislative process allow online participation with concerns having been raised by stakeholders regarding their effectiveness and systematic use. Several new decrees that could further narrow the civic space have been introduced. Amendments to the rules of tax and financial concessions for CSOs have been adopted, which introduced several measures simplifying the tax regime applied to CSOs.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Overall, concerning the recommendations in the 2022 Rule of Law Report, Italy has made:

- Significant progress on continuing the efforts to further improve the level of digitalisation of the justice system, particularly for criminal courts and prosecutors' offices.
- Significant progress on enhancing digitalisation and interconnection of registries thereby improving the police and prosecution operations against high-level corruption.
- Some progress on adopting comprehensive conflict of interest rules and some progress on adopting lobbying regulation to establish an operational lobbying register, including a legislative footprint.
- Some progress on effectively addressing the practice of channelling donations through political foundations and associations and introducing single electronic register for party and campaign finance information.
- Some progress on introducing legislative and other safeguards to reform the regime on defamation, the protection of professional secrecy and journalistic sources, taking into account the European standards on the protection of journalists.
- Some progress on establishing a National Human Rights Institution taking into account the UN Paris Principles.

On this basis, and considering other developments that took place in the period of reference, and in addition to recalling the commitments made under the national Recovery and Resilience Plan relating to certain aspects of the justice system and the anti-corruption framework, it is recommended to Italy to:

- Continue efforts to further improve the level of digitalisation for criminal courts and prosecutors' offices.
- Adopt comprehensive conflicts of interest rules and lobbying regulation to establish an operational lobbying register, including a legislative footprint.
- Effectively and swiftly address the practice of channelling donations through political foundations and associations and introduce a single electronic register for party and campaign finance information.
- Continue the legislative process to reform and introduce safeguards for the regime on defamation, the protection of professional secrecy and journalistic sources, taking into account the European standards on the protection of journalists.
- Continue efforts to establish a National Human Rights Institution taking into account the UN Paris Principles.

I. JUSTICE SYSTEM

The structure of the justice system is set out in the Constitution, which enshrines its independence and autonomy. Ordinary courts have jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters and are organised in three instances. The first instance is composed of justices of the peace, ordinary courts, and juvenile courts. The second and third instances are made up of the courts of appeal and the High Court of Cassation, respectively. Administrative justice is organised in first and second instance courts. Jurisdiction in accounting matters is exercised by the Court of Auditors (with Regional and Central Chambers). Regarding fiscal matters and tax matters, the responsible courts are respectively the newly established tax courts at first and second instance, and for both of them, the High Court of Cassation at the highest level. The structure of the prosecution service mirrors that of the courts. Italy participates in the European Public Prosecutor's Office (EPPO). According to the principle of unity of the judiciary, ordinary judges and public prosecutors are all magistrates, have a common career structure, and are governed by the High Council for the Judiciary¹. Administrative, accounting, and fiscal magistrates have their own self-government bodies. The National Bar Council is an independent and self-governing body established by law. The Constitutional Court decides in exclusivity on disputes regarding the constitutionality of laws.

Independence

While the level of perceived judicial independence in Italy slightly increased in the last years, continues to be low among the general public and is now equally low among companies. Overall, 39% of the general population and 39% of companies perceive the level of independence of courts and judges to be 'fairly or very good' in 2023². The perceived judicial independence among the general public has consistently increased in the last years. This figure has increased in comparison with 2022 (37%), as well as in comparison with 2016 (25%). The perceived judicial independence among companies has decreased slightly in comparison with 2022 (40%), but it is higher than in 2016 (24%).

The effect of the reform on the High Council for the Judiciary (CSM) is being evaluated, while concerns remain on the parts depending on implementing legislation, which is still to be adopted. As mentioned in the 2022 Rule of Law Report³, the reform of the CSM, which was adopted on 16 June 2022, contains directly applicable provisions⁴ and others requiring

² Figures 49 and 51, 2023 EU Justice Scoreboard. The level of perceived judicial independence is categorised as follows: very low (below 30% of respondents perceive judicial independence as fairly good and very good); low (between 30-39%), average (between 40-59%), high (between 60-75%), very high (above 75%).

implementing legislation⁵ by the Government. The directly applicable provisions have already been put in use with the first election of the CSM under the new rules, which took place on 18-19 September 2022 for members elected by their peers and on 17-19 January 2023 for members elected by the Parliament⁶. More time will be needed to determine the full extent of their effect on the work of the CSM⁷. As regards the provisions requiring implementing legislation, the deadline for their adoption, initially indicated as being June 2023⁸ has been extended until December 2023⁹. Consequently, concerns raised last year by stakeholders and by the CSM itself¹⁰ as regards the combined effect that the new provisions¹¹ might have regarding the influence on judges' independence remain. The implementing legislation is expected to address these concerns by providing more detailed provisions on how judicial independence is ensured. According to European standards, the search for enhanced efficiency should not compromise judicial independence¹².

The newly established tax courts started functioning, with some challenges regarding their full independence from the Ministry of Economy and Finance. The commitments under the Recovery and Resilience Plan (RRP) to adopt a comprehensive reform of the tax courts resulted in the adoption of a law on 31 August 2022¹³, which establishes new first and second instance tax courts, and introduced an autonomous and professional role of tax magistrates. According to the adopted law¹⁴, and similarly to the procedure for ordinary magistrates, the tax judges will be appointed by a decree of the Ministry of Economy and

¹¹ The new legislation regulates the organisational powers of court presidents: it introduces a professional evaluation of magistrates, which, among other things, will take into account the achievement of expected results set by presidents of courts and the possibility to initiate disciplinary action for non-compliance with instructions from presidents of courts as to the expected results; it envisages the reduction of the number of middle managerial positions and regulates powers for the First President of the High Court of Cassation; the professional evaluation for high-level positions will take into account the outcome of the ruling in subsequent instances, which may be seen as implicitly calling for a uniform ruling on certain topics. ¹² Recommendation CM/Rec(2010)12 of Committee of Ministers of Council of Europe, para. 22. The principle of judicial independence means the independence of each individual judge in the exercise of adjudicating functions. In their decision-making judges should be independent and impartial and able to act without any restriction, improper influence, pressure, threat or interference, direct or indirect, from any authority, including authorities internal to the judiciary. Hierarchical judicial organisation should not undermine individual independence. See also CM/Rec(2010)12 of Committee of Ministers of Council of Europe, para 37.

Finance (MEF) on a proposal¹⁵ by the Council for Tax Justice (CPGT)¹⁶ following a competition organised by the Board for the Public Competition for Tax Judges¹⁷. The appraisal of the judges, including career progression, will be an exclusive competence of the CPGT¹⁸. As regards disciplinary proceedings against tax judges, they can be initiated by the Prime Minister or by the President of the Tax Court of Second Instance in the region where the judge is appointed¹⁹, and then the case is transferred to the disciplinary office of the CPGT. The administrative staff that work for the CPGT remain civil servants of the MEF, but the latter does not have a decision-making power over the organisation and management of the staff assigned to the CPGT²⁰. Despite these safeguards for the functional and organisational independence of the new tax courts that are in place, some stakeholders have raised concerns due to the fact that the MEF, through one of its agencies²¹, could be a party in the cases before the new courts²².

Several draft laws regarding the separation of careers of judges and prosecutors and reforming the Prosecution Service are under discussion. On 2 February 2023, the Commission on Constitutional Affairs in the Parliament discussed several draft laws prepared by members of parliament, which aim to separate the careers of judges and prosecutors²³. The draft laws also envisage the introduction of distinct self-government bodies and the removal of a provision in the Constitution, which establishes that magistrates are distinguished only by

¹⁹ Art. 16 of Legislative Decree 545/1992 as amended by Law no. 130 of 31 August 2022.

²⁰ The CPGT has organisational and accounting autonomy.

²² Information received from ANM in the context of the country visit to Italy. Written contribution from the CSM in the context of the country visit, pp. 10. In the case law of the Court of Justice of the EU and the European Court of Human Rights, the appearance of independence plays an important role, as the situation cannot give rise to reasonable doubts, in the minds of individuals, as to the imperviousness of the judges concerned to external factors and as to their neutrality with respect to the interests before them, once appointed as judges. See Judgment of the Court of Justice of 19 November 2019, A.K. v Krajowa Rada Sądownictwa, Joined Cases C-585/18, C-624/18 and C-625/18, ECLI:EU:C:2019:982, paras. 127-129. their different functions²⁴. Stakeholders have raised concerns that a rigid separation of the careers could²⁵, lead to a prosecutor becoming increasingly distant from the culture of jurisdiction, possibly making them more prone to potential political influences²⁶. On 11 June 2023, the Minister of Justice informed the Assembly of the ANM any intervention from the Government to reform the justice system would be inspired by the constitutional values of independence and autonomy of all magistrates, judges and prosecutors. While there is no single model in the EU for the institutional set-up of the prosecution service, institutional safeguards are required to ensure that prosecutors are able to fulfil their professional duties and responsibilities under adequate legal and organisational conditions and without interference²⁷. According to European standards, sufficient autonomy must be ensured to shield prosecutorial authorities from undue political influence²⁸.

Concerns have been raised as disciplinary proceedings were initiated against a panel of judges of the Court of Appeal of Milan based on the content of their decision. The disciplinary proceedings were initiated on 19 April 2023 by the Minister of Justice considering that the judges did not take into account certain circumstances which, if properly considered, would have led to a different decision²⁹. These proceedings are now being examined by the Prosecutor General at the Supreme Court of Cassation who will have to decide whether to charge the judges with a disciplinary offence or dismiss the case. It is recalled that according to the case-law of the Court of Justice, the requirement of independence and impartiality entails that a disciplinary regime against magistrates should include rules defining the forms of conduct which constitute a disciplinary offence³⁰. Furthermore, according to the national legislation, ‘the activity of interpreting provisions of law and assessing facts and evidence shall not give rise to disciplinary liability’³¹.

Quality

The increasing recruitment of magistrates and non-judicial staff has continued, and the provisions on the competitions for magistrates have been changed to increase the number of candidates. The trend of increasing recruitment of judicial and administrative staff has

The referendum which managed a turnout of only 21% of those entitled to vote. The referendum was addressed to abrogate the current rules. However, the result proved that citizens did not want to change the rule, which is in line with stakeholders’ opinion. The referendum took place on 12 June 2022. It contained five questions, one of which was regarding the separation of the career of judges and prosecutors. For a referendum to be successful, it should have a turnout of at least 50%+1.

continued over the past year. As regards judicial staff, 20 units (i.e. additional positions for magistrates) have been provided by further expanding the staff of the judiciary³². Furthermore, the state budget for 2022 provided for an increase of 82 units for the judiciary³³. As regards other needs linked to the sectors of international protection and judicial offices supervising execution of criminal sanctions, two Ministerial Decrees³⁴ in 2022 provided for the allocation to supervising offices of 21 out of 82 posts added to the staff establishment plan of the judiciary and for a 52-unit increase in the number of magistrates to be assigned to the specialised Chambers on immigration, international protection, and free movement of EU citizens³⁵. On 15 June 2023, the Council of Ministers adopted a draft law, which provides for an additional increase in the staff establishment plan of the judiciary by 250 units. As regards administrative staff, the staff selected by the relevant competitions took up their duties at the judicial and central administration offices in 2022³⁶. As regards the Office of the Trial and the implementation of the commitments under the RRP, as of 30 October 2022, the Office have recruited 7 743 non-managerial personnel, and 3 209 more contracts were signed by 21 November 2022³⁷. Finally, the rules for competitions have been changed as to allow for university graduates to apply directly to the competitions for magistrates without requiring the additional working experience, which was the case in the previous years³⁸.

Significant progress was made regarding the digitalisation of the justice system, in particular in the field of civil justice. The 2022 Rule of Law Report recommended to Italy to “continue the efforts to further improve the level of digitalisation of the justice system, particularly for criminal courts and prosecutors’ offices”³⁹. Further progress has been noted in the digitalisation of civil justice, which was already advanced⁴⁰ in 2022. Since January 2023, the use of electronic management of all documents has become compulsory⁴¹. It is now mandatory to file applications to the Court on a digital platform, thus enabling the processing of applications digitally and the digital access to the case files of all judges in the Court⁴². A

The 600-unit increase previously provided for by Law no. 145 of 30 December 2018 was followed by Decree-Law no. 118 of 24 August 2021, converted with amendments by Law No. 147 of 21 October 2021, which provided for a further expansion of the staff establishment plan of the judiciary by 20 units, aimed at ensuring the availability of the resources necessary for the implementation of domestic legislation on enhanced cooperation in the field of the European Public Prosecutor’s Office.

fully digitalised trial is yet to be established. Under the RRP, a reform to enable the digitalisation of the justice system is envisaged in the course of 2023 and that RRP targets will monitor its impact in terms of results until 2026. As regards the digitalisation of criminal justice, the realisation of some of the objectives of RRP planned for the end of 2023 are brought forward to 30 June 2023; in particular, the availability of documents on the Portal for the e-filing of the criminal case documents⁴³. The e-portal allows the electronic transmission to the Judicial Offices of acts, documents and applications by authorised external parties⁴⁴. Currently, 10 types of documents are available on the portal⁴⁵. Furthermore, the communication between the High Court of Cassation and the Prosecution Service has been digitalised, and the procedural rules⁴⁶ that would allow for the use of electronic tools⁴⁷ have been clarified. Some efforts are still needed in the use of digital technology by the Prosecution service⁴⁸ and in the availability of electronic communication tools and digital tools to conduct and follow court proceedings in criminal cases⁴⁹. Stakeholders reported that despite the significant progress and the existence of digital services for civil justice, and procedural rules for criminal justice, the overall digitalisation needs to be supported by further investments in materials and training to become fully operational⁵⁰. Considering these developments, significant progress was achieved in fulfilling the recommendation from the 2022 Rule of Law Report.

Efficiency

The length of proceedings, while improving, still remains a serious challenge. Following the temporary slowdown of judicial activity in 2020 and the return to pre-pandemic levels in 2021⁵¹, the efficiency continued improving both for civil⁵² and criminal⁵³ proceedings in 2022. The disposition time for first instance civil and commercial litigious cases fell by 100 days from 2020 to 2021⁵⁴, and further improvements could be observed in 2022, according to the data presented by the authorities. Nevertheless, this disposition time remains among the lengthiest in the EU, as in 2021, it still takes on average more than 550 days to resolve such cases. Some positive developments were reported by the High Court of Cassation, where the

A significant decrease, which is also reinforced by the significant reduction in the disposition time, which has fallen to 1.063 days and already not far from the 976-day target expected in June 2026’. clearance rate of criminal proceedings is currently 113%⁵⁵. Tax cases make up 50% of the pending cases before the High Court of Cassation and a new incentive is envisaged to accelerate their closure. With this new scheme, the parties to the case would be allowed to pay in instalments the sum that they owe in taxes, with the first instalment being a substantial percentage of the whole sum. In case they would not pay the subsequent instalments, a new case could be brought before the first instance tax court, where they would be asked to pay the entire sum, including the instalments previously paid, in order to close the pending case at the level of the High Court of Cassation⁵⁶. This scheme, combined with the new structure of tax courts, could allow for a more efficient dealing with tax cases and lowering the backlog at the last instance. Italy remains under the enhanced supervision of the Council of Europe's Committee of Ministers as regards length of proceedings in administrative and criminal cases⁵⁷.

The implementing legislation for the civil and criminal justice reforms has been adopted.

As mentioned in the 2022 Rule of Law Report, two comprehensive and long-awaited reforms regarding civil⁵⁸ and criminal⁵⁹ justice have been adopted⁶⁰. Both reforms included directly applicable provisions⁶¹ but also empowered the Government to adopt implementing legislation. On 10 October 2022, two Legislative Decrees⁶² were adopted to implement the civil and criminal justice reforms. As regards civil justice, the decree aims at improving the efficiency of the procedure and revises the alternative dispute resolution tools and urgent measures for the rationalisation of certain procedures⁶³. As regards criminal justice, the decree also aims at improving the efficiency of proceedings and covers matters of restorative justice and provisions for the swift finalisation of judicial proceedings⁶⁴. The criminal justice reform was referred to in a decision of the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe on the execution of a judgement on the absence of remedies for the offended person in cases of excessively long

They also noted that the reform appears to respond to the shortcomings found by the Court although its effectiveness is still to be seen⁶⁷. The entry into force of secondary sources of legislation necessary for the effective application of the civil and criminal reforms is expected in the course 2023 under the RRP.

II. ANTI-CORRUPTION FRAMEWORK

The National Anti-Corruption Authority is the main entity in charge of the prevention of corruption within the public administration sector, coordinating the National Anti-Corruption Plan and supervising the adoption of the local three-year anti-corruption action plans. The Anti-Corruption Unit of the Guardia di Finanza is responsible for the investigation and prevention of corruption as a specialised law enforcement body. As an independent authority at the Bank of Italy, the Financial Intelligence Unit provides support to the competent prosecutor's office and cooperates with the Guardia di Finanza as the competent authority for receiving reports of suspicious financial transactions. To prevent and fight corruption in the allocation and implementation process of resources received under the Recovery and Resilience Plan, consultative and control tasks have also been assigned to the Court of Auditors⁶⁸.

The perception among experts and business executives is that the level of corruption in the public sector remains relatively high. In the 2022 Corruption Perceptions Index by Transparency International, Italy scores 56/100 and ranks 16th in the European Union and 41st globally⁶⁹. This perception has improved over the past five years⁷⁰. The 2023 Special Eurobarometer on Corruption shows that 85% of respondents consider corruption widespread in their country (EU average 70%) and 33% of respondents feel personally affected by corruption in their daily lives (EU average 24%)⁷¹. As regards businesses, 92% of companies consider that corruption is widespread (EU average 65%) and 38% consider that that corruption is a problem when doing business (EU average 35%)⁷². Furthermore, 41% of respondents find that there are enough successful prosecutions to deter people from corrupt practices (EU average 32%)⁷³, while 31% of companies believe that people and businesses caught for bribing a senior official are appropriately punished (EU average 30%)⁷⁴.

The level of perceived corruption is categorised as follows: low (the perception among experts and business executives of public sector corruption scores above 79); relatively low (scores between 79-60), relatively high (scores between 59-50), high (scores below 50).

A new National Anti-Corruption Plan for the years 2023-2025 was approved. Italy's National Anti-Corruption Authority (ANAC) approved a new three-year National Anti-Corruption Plan on 16 November 2022 and adopted a corresponding resolution on 17 January 2023⁷⁵. The new plan, based on the main corruption prevention law⁷⁶, is Italy's overarching corruption prevention strategy⁷⁷. ANAC supports the public administration in designing and implementing entity-specific three-year action plans⁷⁸. Its human resources are expected to increase by 28 posts to help it deal with its increased tasks under the national recovery plan, in particular the digitalisation of public procurement procedures⁷⁹. The Plan is divided into two parts. One part is the strengthening of public sector integrity and transparency through the setting up of Integrated Activity Plans and effective safeguards to prevent corruption in public administrations⁸⁰. It also recommends that administrations take appropriate measures to mitigate the phenomenon of 'revolving doors'⁸¹. In view of the allocation and use of funds under the Recovery and Resilience Plan, the other part focuses on public procurement, for instance by assisting contracting authorities to identify and set up corruption-prevention measures to avoid maladministration and to regulate conflicts of interest⁸². The Plan recognises the nexus between anti-corruption and anti-money laundering measures concerning the obligation for public bodies to identify the beneficial owners of companies participating in public tenders, by using the official Ultimate Beneficial Ownership Register⁸³, and to provide ⁷⁸ Each ministry, local government and municipality design and implement their own local plans. These aim at i.a., establishing rules for the appointment of a corruption prevention officer, specifying the public entities' role in evaluating and managing corruption risks, enhancing transparency, supporting whistleblowers, and monitoring privatization procedures. The plan also sets up rules on the drafting of three-year anti-corruption plans in the areas most exposed to corruption, such as healthcare. a declaration of absence of conflict of interest⁸⁴. ANAC manages the National Database of Public Contracts which will be able to collect and keep up-to-date the information on beneficial owners for economic operators to ensure transparency once the Ultimate Beneficial Ownership Register is up and running and the two systems are inter-connected⁸⁵.

A draft law was tabled aiming at abrogating the offence of abuse of public office and limiting the scope of the offence of trading in influence. On 15 June 2023, the Council of Ministers presented a draft law providing for some amendments to the provisions regulating the offences against public administration. In particular, the draft law provides for the abrogation of the offence of abuse of public office and limiting the scope of the offence of trading in influence⁸⁶. These proposed changes would decriminalise important forms of corruption⁸⁷ and could impact the effective detection of and fight against corruption⁸⁸. The draft law further proposes changes to several other provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure on pre-trial incarceration, the possibility of appealing acquittals as well as on special investigative techniques. Judicial authorities are closely following developments on this reform and the potential impact on the investigation, prosecution and adjudication of certain corrupt practices such as trading in influence or abuse of office⁸⁹. Civil society has voiced some concerns about these changes and their possible impact to effectively fight corruption⁹⁰.

The impact of the criminal justice reform on corruption cases closed after the lapse of two years at appeal level is being monitored. The reduction of excessive disposition times⁹¹

Information also received from ANAC, Transparency International and Libera in the context of the country visit to Italy. ANAC has repeatedly called for a similar obligation to declare the beneficiaries for economic operators competing for public contracts. See ANAC, 'Here is the National Anti-Corruption Plan approved by Anac', 6 December 2022.

⁸⁶ According to input from Italy for the 2023 Rule of Law Report, the draft law stems from the observation that in 2021, out of 5292 proceedings concluded for the offence of abuse of office, there were only 9 convictions, which indicates a reduced effectiveness of the achieved results and the disproportion compared to human and economic resources necessary for these procedural activities.

⁸⁹ During the country visit to Italy, police and judicial authorities noted that they were also following the proposed reforms being debated at the time in relation to their ability to use special investigative measures and to investigate certain corrupt practices such as abuse of office and trading in influence. The use of investigative measures, e.g., is vital to demonstrate the so-called 'pactum sceleris' or criminal conspiracy. The use of interceptions as an investigative tool has proved particularly useful for offences against the public administration. by improving the efficiency and effectiveness of the prosecution and adjudication of criminal offences, including corruption, was part of the criminal justice reform adopted in September 2021⁹². While limitation periods were suspended for first instance trials, including for corruption cases, time limits were set for subsequent appeal proceedings⁹³. At appeal level, corruption proceedings would automatically close after a lapse of two years unless the judge requests an extension⁹⁴. As the reform is recent and will only fully enter into force in 2025⁹⁵, it is not yet possible to ascertain its impact on corruption cases, including at the appeal level⁹⁶. Italy has committed to proactively monitor the impact under its Recovery and Resilience Plan⁹⁷.

There has been significant progress on enhancing digitalisation and interconnection of registries as investments in IT tools have increased and financial information is available to law enforcement authorities. The 2022 Rule of Law Report recommended to Italy to ‘continue effective operations of police and prosecution service against high-level corruption, including by enhancing digitalisation and interconnection of registries’⁹⁸. Cooperation and coordination in practice between the various national police and prosecution services, the tax authorities and the Anti-Corruption Authority continues to be effective as was the case last year⁹⁹, as is the cooperation between the police and law enforcement agencies and EPPO¹⁰⁰. All competent authorities underlined the importance of ready access to financial and other data and technical tools to investigate and prosecute corruption and foreign bribery¹⁰¹. The Guardia di Finanza has invested considerable resources in developing and improving IT technologies and has signed specific protocol agreements with several financial entities to share information and access to their respective databases¹⁰². The Ultimate Beneficial Ownership Register set up in June 2022¹⁰³, laying down rules for companies with legal personality, private legal persons, trusts and similar legal institutions to register their beneficial ownership, is an important development to fight corruption and organised crime groups¹⁰⁴ once it is in operation¹⁰⁵. In the context of the use of RRP funds, the sharing of information on public expenditure and the access to certain databases by investigative bodies should allow more timely interventions to intercept anomalous financial movements and investigate unlawful enrichment¹⁰⁶. Therefore, there has been significant progress on the implementation of the recommendation made in the 2022 Rule of Law Report.

⁹³ A positive aspect of the so-called ‘Cartabia reform’ is that certain (minor) corruption offences were not decriminalized (‘exemption from punishment for particularly tenuous acts’) unlike other minor offences that were decriminalized in order to reduce the need for frequent and lengthy trials. This recognizes the importance of tackling corruption offences irrespective of the amounts of money involved. Even if the police will focus on structured crimes or those involving significant amounts, this does not exclude the possibility to prosecute lesser crimes if there are capacities to do so. The OECD has recognized Italy’s efforts to improve enforcement of the Anti-Bribery Convention e.g. by creating the 3rd Department in the Milan prosecutor’s office to tackle foreign bribery and by strengthening the legislative framework in the field of

There has been some progress made to adopt comprehensive legislation on conflicts of interest. The 2022 Rule of Law Report recommended to Italy to ‘adopt comprehensive conflict of interest rules [...]’¹⁰⁷. Previous efforts to adopt comprehensive legislation on conflicts of interest for political office holders, including parliamentarians, have stalled over the years¹⁰⁸. A draft law containing provisions on conflicts of interest of holders of state, regional or local government offices, as well as the President and members of independent supervisory and regulatory authorities is under discussion at the Parliament¹⁰⁹. The bill provides a delegation to the Government to adapt the regulations on local government office holders and members of independent guarantee, supervisory and regulatory authorities, as well as provisions concerning the prohibition of foreign payments by holders of public office. So far, legislation on conflicts of interest remains fragmented¹¹⁰. Although the Chamber of Deputies had been working to formalise and integrate its Code of Conduct into its Rules of Procedure¹¹¹, it did not complete judicial cooperation but remains seriously concerned that foreign bribery cases litigated in Italy have yielded a high number of dismissals. OECD (2022), Implementing the OECD Anti-Bribery Convention, Phase 4 Report for Italy, pp. 6-7 and 86-87.

its work under the previous legislature and resumed discussions under the current legislature, without a timeframe for completion¹¹². The Senate adopted a Code of Conduct for its members on 26 April 2022¹¹³. However, the text is not publicly available and no detailed guidance has yet been issued¹¹⁴. As last year, no further developments were reported concerning the mandatory publication of asset declarations for members of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate, which remains fragmented and non-transparent¹¹⁵. In the absence of substantive legislative developments, there has therefore been some progress on the implementation of the recommendation made in the 2022 Rule of Law Report.

Some progress has been made to address the need to adopt comprehensive lobbying rules and establish a legislative footprint as a parliamentary inquiry is underway. The 2022 Rule of Law Report recommended to Italy to ‘adopt comprehensive [...] lobbying regulation to establish an operational lobbying register, including a legislative footprint’¹¹⁶. Although the Chamber of Deputies has rules on lobbying¹¹⁷ and a lobbying register of interest representatives, comprehensive lobbying rules are lacking for both parliamentary chambers¹¹⁸. As of mid-March 2023, there were only 318 legal persons and 62 natural persons registered¹¹⁹ (275 and 52 respectively in April 2022). In January 2022, the Chamber of Deputies had passed a new lobbying law¹²⁰ that envisaged the establishment of an electronic, mandatory register of interest representatives. The Senate was expected to approve the draft law in early 2023¹²¹. However, this did not take place due to early general elections held in September 2022. At its meeting of 8 March 2023, the First Standing Committee on Constitutional Affairs decided to conduct a fact-finding inquiry into the activities of interest representation and assess the need to draw up new rules. It will take account of the parliamentary work carried out in previous legislatures, particularly those proposals which had reached a more advanced stage¹²². The inquiry is expected to be ready by the end of June 2023. Four draft bills have been tabled by individual members in both chambers, but these have not been debated so far¹²³. Until an operational lobby register, including a ‘legislative footprint’, is set up, regulation of lobbying vis-à-vis the government will remain fragmented¹²⁴. Since a parliamentary inquiry is ongoing to address the need to adopt comprehensive lobbying rules and establish an operational lobbying register, including a legislative footprint, there has been some progress on the implementation of the recommendation in the 2022 Rule of Law Report.

Some progress has been made to address the practice concerning political party and campaign finance as hearings on a draft law have started in the Senate. The 2022 Rule of Law Report recommended to Italy to ‘effectively address the practice of channelling donations through political foundations and associations and introduce a single electronic register for party and campaign finance information’¹²⁵. The practice of channelling donations through political foundations and associations before they are transferred to political parties presents an obstacle to public accountability, as such transactions are difficult to trace and monitor¹²⁶. Debates on the issue over several parliamentary terms had not resulted in any change¹²⁷. A centralised, single, machine-readable register to help ensure that political party and campaign finance information is made available in a coherent, understandable, and timely manner is still lacking¹²⁸. Various draft laws have now been tabled under the current legislature¹²⁹ in both houses of parliament to amend or replace the current rules on political parties’ public funding, ¹²² The enquiry by the First Standing Committee for Constitutional Affairs will focus on four main issues: defining the scope of the rules i.e., defining the ‘public decision-maker’ and of the ‘stakeholder’; (interested parties and lobbyists); the different methods of regulating the issue (e.g., need for a mandatory register and the information to include in it; the identifying a supervisory authority (e.g., an independent administrative authority); and the system of sanctions and penalties. Apart from previous draft legislative proposals, the inquiry will also take account of the measures taken or under consideration in the European Union and in France, Germany, the United Kingdom and the United States. See Chamber of Deputies (XIX Parliamentary Term) Documentation and Research Service, ‘Rules on interest representation’ No. 25, 23 March 2023. Information also received from the Parliament in the context of the country visit to Italy. The Good Lobby and Libera lamented the lack of legislative progress on this topic, were aware that a new cycle of hearings should be taking place but noted that nothing concrete has been tabled yet.

¹²⁴ Furthermore, it is to be noted that GRECO has now reversed its initial assessment of its recommendation v concerning lobbying regulation for both chambers from ‘partly implemented’ to ‘not implemented’. According to information received from Transparency International in the context of the country visit to Italy, only around 10% of associations report financial interests on their website. Another shortcoming is that the quality of the data is not unified in a central source and not available as open data and not coherent.

and hearings have started in the Senate¹³⁰. Some of the ideas put forward include reducing the maximum limit for financial contributions from legal persons from EUR 100 000 to EUR 50 000¹³¹. There still is no centralised, single, machine-readable register in place to help ensure that political party and campaign finance information is made available in a coherent, understandable, and timely manner. Given these developments, there has been some progress regarding the implementation of the recommendation made in the 2022 Rule of Law Report.

The new law on whistleblower protection entered into force covering breaches of both EU and national law. In March 2023, the Council of Ministers approved Legislative Decree No. 24/2023¹³². The law aims to implement the EU Whistleblowers Directive¹³³ and will apply from 15 July 2023. It covers whistleblowers in both the public and the private sectors and consolidates protections under existing laws¹³⁴. It applies to reports of breaches of both EU and national law that may harm the public interest¹³⁵. It obliges entities with more than 50 employees to establish internal and external reporting channels. The National Anti-Corruption Authority (ANAC) is the competent authority to receive external reports for both the public and private sectors and to issue administrative sanctions¹³⁶. ANAC is expected to receive additional funding and 28 more staff posts¹³⁷ to deal with these new competences and improve its existing complaints platform. The law provides for various protections, such as a prohibition on retaliation. These protections also cover anonymous whistleblowers and persons connected to the whistleblowers, such as those who help them come forward. The law allows non-profit entities to provide support measures, which is welcomed by civil society¹³⁸. The new law is seen as a key tool in fighting corruption as reports of certain illegal acts, which may not be corruption offences as such, may well point to the presence of corruption¹³⁹.

¹³⁰ Discussions on Senate Act No. 552, ‘Amendment to Law no. 6 of 2012 July 96 on the discipline of the Commission for the verification of statutes and the control of the accounts of political parties’ took place on 4, 12 and 19 April. The protection of whistleblowers in the private sector was limited under these rules as it was based on voluntary compliance programmes.

Transparency International and Libera noted that public sector whistleblowers can report breaches of both national and EU law whereas the private sector is limited to EU law breaches (unless already allowed under existing whistleblowing laws, and as the lack of financial support for whistleblowers. A new Public Procurement Code aimed at simplification and efficiency has been established. The Flash Eurobarometer on Businesses' attitudes towards corruption in the EU shows that 10% of companies in Italy (EU average 26%) think that corruption has prevented them from winning a public tender or a public procurement contract in practice in the last three years¹⁴⁰. A new Public Procurement Code entered into force on 1 April 2023 and will apply to new public tenders from 1 July 2023¹⁴¹. It aims to simplify and streamline certain procedures and to accelerate and liberalise the procurement process¹⁴². It includes the complete digitalisation of procedures and the establishment of a procurement database as well as an increase in the thresholds within which the contracting authorities can proceed with direct awards¹⁴³. As reported last year¹⁴⁴, law enforcement and judicial authorities continue to see an increased potential for organised crime to infiltrate the legal economy and the future procurements of public funds under the RRP particularly due to its size which could have a significant impact on the misuse of public money¹⁴⁵.

III. MEDIA PLURALISM AND MEDIA FREEDOM

In Italy, media freedom and pluralism find legal and formal protection in the Constitution, which guarantees press freedom and the right to freedom of expression¹⁴⁶. Secondary legislation¹⁴⁷ provides for a comprehensive and robust framework ensuring media pluralism while the Autorità per le Garanzie nelle Comunicazioni (AGCOM) assumes the role of the independent regulator for the media sector. The right of access to information is ensured by the Italy has an independent and effective media regulator with extensive powers. The Italian Communication Regulatory Authority (AGCOM) oversees audiovisual, press, electronic communications and postal service sectors, and is entrusted with regulatory, monitoring, enforcement and sanctioning powers in the media sector.¹⁴⁹ Over the previous two years, following the transposition in the Italian legal framework of several pieces of EU legislation, including the Audiovisual Media Services Directive¹⁵⁰, the Copyright Directive¹⁵¹, and the Electronic Communication Code¹⁵², AGCOM's competences have been extended to matters related to digital and media literacy initiatives as well as to the regulation and supervision of digital media and online platforms, including digital advertising and pluralism, disinformation and hate speech issues in the online environment¹⁵³. In order to fulfil its extensive functions, AGCOM relies on a self-financing system based on contributions collected from the undertakings that operate under its regulatory remit¹⁵⁴. Rules aimed at safeguarding AGCOM's independence vis-à-vis political and economic actors are in place¹⁵⁵. In particular, according to a cooling-off period rule, for two years after the end of their terms in the authority, former AGCOM's President, Board Members and managers cannot engage in any direct or indirect relationship with undertakings operating in the sectors falling under AGCOM's regulatory remit¹⁵⁶. Moreover, the rules governing the appointment of the Commissioners and the President of AGCOM have also been strengthened in the context of the transposition of the Electronic Communications Code¹⁵⁷.

Public service media play a major role in the media landscape while safeguards for their editorial and financial independence need to be strengthened. There have been no developments concerning the legislative framework regulating the governance and funding

As for the media sector, the Law Decree no. 63/2012 has conferred AGCOM new competences on the online information system including online press and online advertising. More recently, new competences have been entrusted to AGCOM by the Legislative Decree no. 177/2021 and the Legislative Decree 181/2021 on collective societies (on online copyright) and by the national implementation of the revised Audiovisual Media Services Directive by the Legislative Decree 208/2021.

system of the public service media RAI-Radiotelevisione Italiana S.p.a (RAI)¹⁵⁸, notwithstanding the need, as mentioned in the 2022 Rule of Law Report and MPM 2023, of a reform allowing RAI to be better equipped vis-à-vis risks of political influence and financial dependence on the Government¹⁵⁹. In particular, RAI pointed to the need of more adequate and stable financial resources, as well as a more coherent and up-to-date legislative framework in order to effectively fulfil its public mission and better address the challenges posed by digitalisation¹⁶⁰. This is required also in view of the role the public service media in the Italian media landscape. In fact, RAI has the largest audience in the linear television sector, accounting for 37,9% of the audiences on an average day¹⁶¹ and reaching weekly more than 90% of citizens over 14 years old¹⁶², and is the main player in the radio sector, holding 23,5% of market share in terms of revenues¹⁶³. RAI has also been active in fostering social cohesion, promoting cultural diversity, as well as enhancing media freedom and pluralism, including by means of debunking and media literacy initiatives aimed to fight disinformation¹⁶⁴. Similarly, RAI has recently reformed and reinforced its strategies and governance in view of raising its engagement in the field of sustainability. In particular, the new directorate “RAI per la Sostenibilità – ESG” has been established in order to identify and develop good practices needed to meet the sustainability and accountability goals required for the fulfilment of RAI’s public service remit¹⁶⁵.

The Government has adopted measures to support media under economic distress although there is a need for more structural interventions to promote media pluralism.

Following the COVID-19 crisis, the indicators of economic sustainability have improved, and revenues of traditional media have started to grow¹⁶⁶. Nevertheless, the recovery of the media sector is slower than that of the overall economy and has not reversed the structural decline of the sector, in particular as regards the press, where stakeholders fear an upsurge of unemployment¹⁶⁷. Over the last few years, the Government has adopted a series of ordinary and extraordinary initiatives aimed at alleviating economic distress in the media sector, which included measures to foster and support technological innovation and digital transition in the press, TV and radio sectors, as well as financial contribution schemes aimed to foster the recruitment of young professionals with media-specific competences and the stabilisation of journalistic employment through the conversion of temporary contracts into fixed-term contracts¹⁶⁸. Nevertheless, there is a need, as also indicated by several stakeholders, of more structural interventions, designed in such a manner as to prevent concentration of funding with large and medium-size media outlets, and ensure a fairer distribution of resources to non-profit, small or local media outlets in view of better supporting the regional and local news industry, where journalists are more vulnerable, and the effects of the economic distress have a more severe impact on media freedom and pluralism¹⁶⁹.

There is a specific legal framework in place ensuring a certain degree of media ownership transparency. In Italy, the principle of transparency is enshrined in the Constitution¹⁷⁰ and is further regulated in the law which requires radio and audiovisual service providers to make easily, directly, and permanently accessible information on their media ownership¹⁷¹. AGCOM manages the Register of Communication Operators¹⁷², to which every operator in the media sector, including search engines and online intermediary services, is compelled to apply and where information on the ownership structure of media companies is collected¹⁷³. However, the 2023 Media Pluralism Monitor pointed out that the framework in relating to the transparency of media ownership needs to be further strengthened, particularly as regards the access to information that could help to identify beneficial owners¹⁷⁴. As regards media concentrations, according to specific anti-concentration rules applicable to the media sector, AGCOM is tasked with the assessment of media market concentrations and has the power to prohibit those leading to the formation of significant market power positions detrimental to media pluralism¹⁷⁵.

Rules ensuring access to information are in place although stakeholders voiced concerns regarding their practical effectiveness. The right of access to information held by public bodies is ensured by the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), the implementation of which is monitored annually¹⁷⁶, and which includes rules regulating cases of restrictions to the access

On top of such ordinary measure, the Government also established an extraordinary fund in 2022 in order to sustain employment levels and foster the digital transition in the media sector. and requiring public authorities to duly justify access denials¹⁷⁷. However, some stakeholders stressed the need to improve the implementation of the FOIA and its effectiveness to ensure that public authorities handle the requests of access consistently and in a timely manner¹⁷⁸. As regards the right of access to judicial information and the journalistic coverage of crimes, the Council of Ministers presented on 15 June 2023 a draft law including amendments limiting the possibility for newspapers and journalists to access and publish the content of wiretaps¹⁷⁹.

Despite relevant rules and initiatives in place, attacks, threats and other forms of intimidation against journalists remain a source of concern. Italy has been active in the field of protection of journalists against threats and attacks through several legislative interventions, which include the provision, in case of threats of violence against journalists, of specific protection protocols involving police and judicial authorities as well as local governments¹⁸⁰, and regulatory initiatives of AGCOM, such as the Hate speech Regulation¹⁸¹, aimed to strengthen the protection of journalists targeted by verbal threats, smear campaigns and other forms of online harassment¹⁸². Furthermore, in 2022 Italy hosted the third edition of the Journalists in Residence programme¹⁸³, which is aimed to provide journalists and media professionals experiencing risks or threats related to their journalistic work with a safe place where they can continue their investigative and reporting activities¹⁸⁴. Italy also has a specialised Coordination Centre established within the Ministry of the Interior and dedicated to monitoring cases of violence and abuses against journalists and media outlets¹⁸⁵. Nevertheless, stakeholders¹⁸⁶ have stressed that attacks and threats against journalists continue related to alleged arbitrary denials or a lack of answers. 45% of appeals requests were accepted, FOIA Centro nazionale di competenza (2021), Monitoraggio sull'attuazione del FOIA nel 2020.

to be a source of concern¹⁸⁷. Since the 2022 Rule of Law Report, 30 alerts concerning Italy where registered by the Council of Europe’s Platform to promote the protection of journalism and safety of journalists¹⁸⁸, while the Mapping Media Freedom platform reported 46 incidents in 2022 and 34 incidents in the first five months of 2023¹⁸⁹. According to the latest available statistics published by the Italian authorities, covering the first three months of 2023, 28 acts of intimidation were recorded, of which 7% concerned organised crime and 43% were of a ‘political-social nature’, while 10 out of 28 cases (36%) occurred online¹⁹⁰. In addition, several stakeholders have pointed to an increasing trend with respect to SLAPPs instigated by political figures and targeting media professionals, with a chilling effect on freedom of information and the journalistic work¹⁹¹. As in previous years¹⁹², several stakeholders also continued to refer to the deterioration of working conditions in the media sector as a further challenge to journalists’ independence and safety¹⁹³.

Some progress has been achieved as a reform of the regime on defamation and the protection of professional secrecy and journalistic sources has been initiated. The 2022 Rule of Law Report recommended to Italy to ‘introduce legislative and other safeguards to reform the regime on defamation, the protection of professional secrecy and journalistic sources, taking into account the European standards on the protection of journalists’¹⁹⁴. The recommendation stemmed from the fact that, as reported in previous reports¹⁹⁵, the Italian legislator had not taken action with respect to the long-standing issue of criminalisation of defamation¹⁹⁶ even though the Constitutional Court¹⁹⁷ had held that the penalty of imprisonment for press defamation provided for in Article 13 of the Press Law was unconstitutional and incompatible with Article 10 of the European Convention of Human Rights, and had invited the Italian Parliament to reform the defamation regime¹⁹⁸. Moreover, the recommendation also took into account the need to strengthen the Italian legal framework on professional secrecy in order to provide more effective protection to journalists and their sources¹⁹⁹. On 16 January 2023, a legislative proposal to amend the defamation law was presented at the Italian Senate²⁰⁰, where it is currently under examination in the Justice Committee²⁰¹. The proposal abolishes the penalty of imprisonment for press defamation and substitutes it with a fine from EUR 5 000 to EUR 10 000, increased from EUR 10 000 to EUR 50 000 in cases where the defamation concerns false information that the journalist knew to be false²⁰². The proposal also amends the rules on corrections and apologies²⁰³, extends the regime of press defamation to online press as well as to television and radio newscasts²⁰⁴, lays down a procedure for notification and removal of offensive content published on online platforms and the corresponding activation of a conciliation mechanism between the parties before an independent self-regulatory body established by AGCOM²⁰⁵. The proposal also addresses the issue of the protection of professional secrecy and journalistic sources as it extends the relevant regime also to non-professional journalists.²⁰⁶ However, some challenges remain regarding the protection of journalists in the context of their reporting activities, including in criminal investigations²⁰⁷. In particular, the conduct of criminal investigations should not impinge on the journalists' right to engage with relevant sources securely and safely²⁰⁸. Considering these developments, there was some progress on implementing the recommendation made in the 2022 Rule of Law Report, as the work on the relevant legislative proposal is still at an early stage.

IV. OTHER INSTITUTIONAL ISSUES RELATED TO CHECKS AND BALANCES

Italy is a unitary parliamentary republic with an indirectly elected President²⁰⁹. The Parliament is bicameral: it comprises the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate, both having the same powers. The right of legislative initiative is vested in the Government, the members of Parliament, 50 000 citizens, the National Council for Economics and Labour²¹⁰, and the Regional Council. The Constitutional Court decides in exclusivity on disputes regarding the constitutionality of laws. There is currently no national human rights institution, and several regional ombudspersons are responsible for safeguarding the freedoms and rights of persons²¹¹. The Inter-ministerial Committee for Human Rights (CIDU) is the coordinating national institution interacting with civil society, academia, and all relevant stakeholders to ensure reporting and follow-up on human rights issues.

Public consultations in the legislative process allow online participation while challenges regarding their effectiveness in practice have been pointed out. Regulatory impact assessments (RIA) and public consultations are a mandatory part of the legislative process²¹². Improvements can be noted in the area of RIAs, where ex post evaluations have become more common across a wider range of policy areas, and the public is now informed in advance of ex post evaluations that will take place through two-year plans posted on the website of each ministry²¹³. However, even though the ex post evaluations are now conducted more often, they are not conducted systematically²¹⁴. The public consultation processes have been improved by the creation of a single online access point²¹⁵. However, stakeholders report that there is no systematic consultation carried out by the Government²¹⁶. The process seems to allow the participation of many but there is no information as to what has been taken into account from the consulted stakeholders²¹⁷. It also appears that public consultations are not consistent across different ministries, and that feedback from consultations is not systematically responded to, nor taken into account²¹⁸. The Civic Observatory²¹⁹ for the implementation of the Recovery and Resilience Plan (RRP) has also stressed the need for more transparency of data regarding projects financed through the RRP and more openness of the decision-making process to civil society bodies. To achieve this, in November 2022, they launched the campaign “Well communicated data”²²⁰. Through this campaign, there are currently more than 45 thousand signatories and 298 promoting organisations that ask the Government and Parliament for open and machine-readable data on the main issues of interest to citizens, starting with the RRP data. Moreover, the Government created a position of a Minister for Institutional Reforms and Regulatory Simplification who is tasked with promoting the reduction of the stock of existing regulation, as part of the ongoing process for simplification and reorganisation of the regulatory framework.

²⁰⁸ This issue has been also raised by some stakeholders, see Article 19 Europe (2022). The need to strengthen the protection of the right to freedom of expression and information through legal reforms in Italy – Legal briefing, pp. 13-14; International Press Institute (2022), Italy: New government must improve legal framework for media freedom.

²⁰⁹ The President is elected by Parliament, meeting in joint session, together with 58 regional electors.

²¹⁰ The National Council for Economics and Labour is also vested with the right to propose legislation in the economic and social field.

On 1 January 2023, Italy had 59 leading judgments of the European Court of Human Rights pending implementation, an increase of one compared to the previous year²²¹. At that time, Italy’s rate of leading judgments from the past 10 years that remained pending was at 63% (compared to 58% in 2022) and the average time that the judgments had been pending implementation was over 6 years and 2 months (compared to over 5 years and 10 months in 2022)²²². The oldest leading judgment, whose implementation is pending for 25 years, concerns the excessive length of administrative proceedings²²³. On 15 June 2023, the number of leading judgments pending implementation had increased to 61²²⁴.

Some progress has been made on establishing a National Human Rights Institution, as two new draft laws are under discussion. The 2022 Rule of Law Report recommended to Italy to “increase efforts to establish a National Human Rights Institution taking into account the UN Paris Principles”²²⁵. On 9 November 2022, the Government tabled a new draft law to create a National Human Rights Institution (NHRI)²²⁶. This new draft envisages to attribute additional powers to the already existing Data Protection Authority (DPA), which would then be responsible for ensuring the respect and protection of human rights, including online, going ²²¹ The adoption of necessary execution measures for a judgment by the European Court of Human Rights is supervised by the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe. It is the Committee’s practice to group cases against a State requiring similar execution measures, particularly general measures, and examine them jointly. The first case in the group is designated as the leading case as regards the supervision of the general measures and repetitive cases within the group can be closed when it is assessed that all possible individual measures needed to provide redress to the applicant have been taken.

²²⁵ See 2022 Rule of Law Report, Country Chapter on the rule of law situation in Italy, p. 2.

²²⁶ As mentioned in the 2020, 2021 and 2022 Rule of Law Reports, several draft laws had been tabled through the years to address this long-standing commitment. They were focusing on creating a new, self-standing institution to address the commitment. However, none of these draft laws resulted in the creation of a National Human Rights Institution. Finally, the new Government decided to propose a completely new draft law that builds upon an already existing institution.

beyond the mere protection of personal data²²⁷. Nevertheless, the draft law does not envisage any further expansion of the resources (human or financial) for this authority²²⁸. While the Paris Principles²²⁹ do not specify the type of institution that could be a NHRI, and they allow for a multi-mandated bodies, they require any such institution is independent from the government; has adequate resources, so that NHRIs have the funding, staffing, infrastructure and institutional capacity to perform their functions and discharge their responsibilities. While, from the perspective of the EU Data Protection Regulation²³⁰, it is accepted for a DPA to take on additional competences this is provided that the conditions under the Regulation are met²³¹. On 16 May 2023, a new draft law was tabled in Parliament by one of the political parties²³². This is a one-article proposal, which inserts a provision into the Constitution, establishing the independent national body, outlining its functions, articulation and composition²³³. This brings the number of pending legislative proposals for the creation of an NHRI to five. As in previous years, while draft laws are being tabled, there is no follow-up. Therefore, there are still no further concrete actions taken to establish a National Human Rights Institution in practice, which was also confirmed by stakeholders²³⁴. Therefore, only some progress was achieved so far in fulfilling the recommendation made in the 2022 Rule of Law Report.

Several new decrees were adopted that might negatively affect the work of civil society organisations, while amendments improved the rules of tax and financial concessions for CSOs. The civic space continues to be assessed as narrowed²³⁵. Between October 2022 and January 2023, three decrees²³⁶ have been introduced (dealing with migration and conduct of CSOs). Stakeholders noted that these decrees could have or already have a negative effect on the work of civil society organisations (CSOs) as they may impose significant fines if some of them are not respected, and may restrict freedom of association and the protection of civil society space as pointed out by the Council of Europe²³⁷. Moreover, stakeholders report an increase in rhetorical attacks against CSOs and media, in particular against humanitarian CSOs working on migration issues, including smear campaigns against their work²³⁸. In its 2022 concluding observations the UN Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights expressed its concerns about repeated allegations of harassment, physical threats and verbal attacks by politicians and the press on human rights defenders and journalists defending economic, social and cultural rights, particularly in the context of the protection of refugees²³⁹. At the same time, positive amendments to the rules of tax and financial concessions for CSOs have been adopted²⁴⁰. These amendments introduced several measures simplifying the tax regime applied to CSOs. More specifically, the amendments provided clarifications related to the application of criteria to establish when an activity is carried out in a commercial or non-commercial manner²⁴¹. The amendments also clarified that CSOs and volunteering organisations can obtain an income exemption for real estate used for carrying out their general interest activities²⁴².

This is a tax definition of crucial importance for civil-society organisations since it also affects the choices related to the legal status to be assumed and the subsequent applicable tax regime. As a general rule, an activity of general interest is non-commercial if it is carried out in substantial economic break-even, taking into account the comparison between the consideration received and the costs incurred, also considering the possibility of achieving a profit margin that, within certain limits, would in any case remain non-taxable.
