REGULATION OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COUNCIL

establishing a common system for the return of third-country nationals staying illegally in the Union, and repealing Directive 2008/115/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council, Council Directive 2001/40/EC and Council Decision 2004/191/EC

THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND THE COUNCIL OF THE EUROPEAN UNION,

Having regard to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, and in particular Article 79 (2), point (c), thereof,

Having regard to the proposal from the European Commission,

After transmission of the draft legislative act to the national Parliaments,

Having regard to the opinion of the European Economic and Social Committee<sup>1</sup>,

Having regard to the opinion of the Committee of the Regions<sup>2</sup>,

Acting in accordance with the ordinary legislative procedure,

Whereas:

- (1) The Union, in constituting an area of freedom, security and justice, should have a common policy on the return of third-country nationals with no right to stay in the Union. An effective return policy is a key component of a credible migration management system.
- (2) This Regulation establishes a common system for returning third-country nationals illegally staying in the Member States based on a common procedure for return, effective cooperation with third countries, obligations for the illegally staying third-country national, a set of tools for managing effective returns, including measures to incentivise return, and cooperation ■ between Member States.

- (2a) In accordance with Article 72 TFEU, this Regulation does not affect the exercise of the responsibilities incumbent upon Member States with regard to the maintenance of law and order and the safeguarding of internal security
- (3) To contribute to the implementation of the comprehensive approach set out in the Regulation (EU) 2024/1351 of the European Parliament and of the Council<sup>3</sup>, a common system for effectively managing of the return of illegally staying third-country nationals should be put in place. That common system should be based on integrated policy-making to ensure coherence and effectiveness of the actions and measures taken by the Union and its Member States acting within their respective competencies.
- (4) The European Council has consistently underlined the importance for determined action at all levels to facilitate, increase and speed up returns from the European Union. The European Council in October 2024 invited the Commission to submit a new legislative proposal, as a matter of urgency.
- (5) The Strategic guidelines for legislative and operational planning within the area of freedom, security and justice adopted by the Justice and Home Affairs Council on 12 December 2024 recall that a successful return policy is a fundamental pillar of a comprehensive and credible Union asylum and migration system. To this end, the strategic guidelines call to develop and implement a more assertive and comprehensive approach to returns, by upgrading the legal framework as a matter of urgency.
- (6) An effective return policy should ensure coherence with and contribute to the integrity of the Pact on Migration and Asylum and contribute to managing illegal immigration to the Union and preventing unauthorised movements between Member States of illegally staying third-country nationals ■ while respecting fundamental rights.

(7) The Union and its Member States have been increasing efforts to make return policies more effective. Despite these efforts, the existing legal framework which consists of Council Directive 2001/40/EC<sup>4</sup> and Directive 2008/115/EC<sup>5</sup>, is no longer corresponding to the needs of the Union migration policy and the legislative and operational needs to ensure effective returns. Since the adoption of Directive 2008/115/EC in 2008, the area of freedom, security and justice and the Union's migration policy has considerably evolved. EU law in the area of migration has moved from legislation with minimum standards to bringing Member States' practices closer. The Commission sought to reform the return rules in 2018 with the proposal to recast the Return Directive<sup>6</sup>. The Commission has also sought to support Member States in using the flexibilities of Directive 2008/115/EC through Recommendations (EU) 2017/2338<sup>7</sup> and (EU) 2023/682<sup>8</sup>. However, the limits of the current legal framework have been reached.

- (8) A common procedure for effective return that is firm ■ should be set up to ensure that third-country nationals who do not, or no longer fulfil the conditions for entry, stay or residence on the territory of the Member States are returned in a humane and sustainable manner and with full respect for fundamental rights as well as international law without undue delay. Clear and transparent rules applicable in all Member States should provide certainty for the third-country national concerned and competent authorities. It is important to simplify, facilitate and speed up return procedures and ensure that return is not obstructed, including by unauthorised movements to other Member States.
- (9) The application of the rules pursuant to this Regulation should not affect the rules on access to international protection in accordance with Regulation (EU) 2024/1348 of the European Parliament and the Council<sup>9</sup>. Where relevant, the rules in this Regulation are complemented by the specific rules linking negative asylum decisions and return decisions for issuance and for remedies in Regulation (EU) 2024/1348 and the return border procedure set out in Regulation (EU) 2024/1349 of the European Parliament and the Council<sup>10</sup>.
- (10) This Regulation respects the fundamental rights of third-country nationals and observes the principles recognised in particular by the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union (the ‘Charter’) as well as the Geneva Convention relating to the Status of Refugees of 28 July 1951, as supplemented by the New York Protocol of 31 January 1967 (the ‘Geneva Convention’). It should be applied in compliance with the Charter, general principles of Union law and relevant international law.

removed, expelled or extradited to a third country where there is a serious risk that he or she would be subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

- (12) The Member State on whose territory the illegally staying third-country national is detected is responsible for ensuring his or her return. ■
- (12a) The court or tribunal designated as competent by the Member State under national law should be in charge of the remedy challenging the return decision, entry ban, and decision ordering the removal. Compliance with the requirements arising from the principle of non-refoulement should be verified where material in the file brought to the attention of the court or tribunal designated as competent under national law for the remedy against the return decision or the decision ordering the removal, as supplemented or clarified following adversarial proceedings, suggests that the principle of non-refoulement might be undermined.
- (12b) Without prejudice to the right to an effective remedy provided by Article 47 of the Charter ensuring that the third-country national can challenge the period of voluntary departure or the absence thereof in the return decision, the part of the return decision imposing or stating the obligation to leave the territory of the Member States should not be affected by the annulment or revocation of the period of voluntary departure.
- (13) *In case of removal, authorities designated as competent under national law should verify compliance with the principle of non-refoulement on the basis of an individual assessment taking into account all relevant circumstances. The third-country national concerned should submit and substantiate as quickly as possible, and prior to his or her removal, evidence relating to his or her own personal circumstances. It should be possible to rely upon an existing ■ assessment of all relevant circumstance made in previous stages of the procedure or in other previous procedures. Any relevant change in circumstances and any new element evidencing a risk should be examined, including to determine whether they are substantiated and not considered to have been brought forward by the third-country national merely in order to delay or frustrate the removal.
- (13a) Member States may refer the third-country national who indicates that the removal would breach the principle of non-refoulement to the appropriate procedure, including the asylum procedure in reference to Regulation 2024/1348 of the European Parliament and of the Council establishing a common procedure for international protection in the Union and repealing Directive 2013/32/EU. The Member State may refer the third country national to the appropriate procedure also when its authorities designated as competent under national law become aware of relevant indications that the removal would breach the principle of non-refoulement.

- (14) It is necessary that Member States can cooperate more flexibly, including through new bilateral agreements or arrangements, and in a more targeted manner to foster effective returns to third countries.
- (15) Once it is established that the third-country national does not or no longer fulfil the conditions for entry, stay or residence on the territory of the Member States, a return decision should be swiftly issued based on an individual assessment taking into account all relevant facts and circumstances. The return decision should state the obligation for the third-country national to leave the territory of the Member States. The return decision should not be required to determine a country of return. The country of return should at the latest be determined prior to removal, and may be determined in either the return decision or in any other decision ordering the removal separate from the return decision. Where there is a hindrance of removal, issuance of a return decision should not be precluded, but removal should be postponed.

Where, at the time of issuance of the decision determining the country of return, it remains possible that the third country national will be removed to one of several countries of return, including due to dual or multiple citizenship, all such countries of return can be determined in that decision. The right to an effective remedy provided by Article 47 of the Charter is to be ensured in respect of all the countries of return determined in the decision. In any event, where the competent authority proceeds with removal, the third-country national should be informed of the country of return to which he or she will be removed sufficiently in advance of the removal.

- (15a) Nothing in this regulation should preclude Member States from providing other grounds for postponing removal for specific groups in national law.
- (15b) The third-country national with an obligation to leave should have the primary responsibility for departing the territory of the Member States.
- (16) It is necessary to ensure that the essential elements of a return decision issued by a Member State are entered in a specific form as a European Return Order and made available in ■ the Schengen Information System together with the alert on return or through bilateral information exchange with another Member State. The European Return Order should in turn support the recognition and enforcement of enforceable return decisions or decisions ordering the removal issued by another Member State where the third country national moves unauthorised to another Member State.
- (17) ■
- (18) Where a third-country national present on the territory of a Member State is subject to an enforceable return decision from another Member State, ■ recognition and enforcement of return decisions should facilitate and accelerate the return process on the basis of enhanced cooperation and mutual trust between Member States. Such recognition and enforcement can also contribute to deterring irregular migration and discouraging unauthorised secondary movements within the Union, as well as limiting delays in the return process. The remedy against the return decision should be exercised only in the issuing Member State.
- (18a) The recognition of a return decision or a decision ordering the removal based on the information available in the European Return Order referred to in Article 7(7) should not constitute a decision or act. The non-recognition of a return decision or a decision ordering the removal should not constitute a decision or act.
- (18b) Where a Member State considers recognising and enforcing an enforceable return decision or a decision ordering the removal of the issuing Member State, the following guiding principles may assist the Member State in identifying situations in which mutual recognition should not be applied and in which a national return decision should instead be issued. Such situations may include where an enforcement would be contrary to the enforcing Member States public policy, including in relation to the return of certain categories of third-country nationals, such as unaccompanied minors and victims of human trafficking, to which national law provides for a higher level of protection; issuing a new return decision is faster; the information available in the European Return Order is incomplete; the third country national has lodged an appeal against the return decision in the issuing Member State; the third country national is to be removed to a different third country than stated in the return decision or decision ordering the removal of the issuing Member State, and there is no country of return stated in the return decision.

(18c) For the purpose of preparing the steps towards mandatory mutual recognition, the Commission and relevant EU agencies, such as eu-LISA, should, where relevant, support Member States, including by identifying the necessary arrangements and adjustments needed for the purpose of ensuring automated handling of the European Return Order.

*(19) At the latest, by the adoption of the implementing act referred to in Article 7(8), Member States and the Commission and relevant EU agencies, such as eu-LISA, should start putting in place legal and technical arrangements to ensure that the European Return Order ■ can be made available through the Schengen Information System. **■

(19a) Two years after the date of entry into application referred to in Article 52(3) of this Regulation the Commission should assess the implementation of mutual recognition, in particular as regards: whether the legal and technical arrangements making the European Return Order available through the Schengen Information System pursuant to Article 7(7) are put in place by the Member States and are effective; whether the legal and technical arrangements to ensure automated handling of the European Return Order pursuant to Article 7(9) are put in place by the Member States; the effectiveness of the recognition and enforcement of return decisions and decisions ordering the removal; the burden on judicial and administrative national systems resulting thereof, and results of relevant training and pilot project activities.

enforcement of enforceable return decisions and decisions ordering the removal issued by another Member State. Where the Commission does not submit a proposal, it should explain the reason thereof.

- (20) The effects of national return measures should continue to be given a Union dimension by establishing an entry ban prohibiting entry into and stay on the territory of all Member States. The length of an entry ban should be determined with due regard to all relevant circumstances of an individual case ■ . When an illegally staying third-country national is detected during exit checks at the external borders, it could be appropriate to impose an entry ban in order to prevent future re-entry and therefore to reduce the risks of illegal immigration while not preventing the swift departure of the third-country national.
- (21) Third country nationals who have not complied with the obligation to leave or to whom a period for voluntary return has not been granted, can be removed by using coercive measures. Reinforced rules on removal seek to ensure a direct and immediate consequence in case the third-country national does not respect the period by which they need to leave at the latest as well as to prevent unauthorised secondary movements and security risks. Where there are no reasons to believe that voluntary return would undermine the purpose of a return procedure, cooperating third-country nationals may continue to be returned primarily through voluntary return. Coercive measures should be subject to the principles of proportionality and effectiveness with regard to the means used and objectives pursued.
- (21a) Since this regulation solely applies to third-country nationals staying illegally in the Union, it does not affect return and reintegration counselling and other programmes for supporting voluntary returns and reintegration of third-country nationals who are staying legally in the Union.
- (22) Common rules are necessary to ensure that illegally staying third-country nationals posing security risks ■ are efficiently identified and swiftly returned. It is necessary to ensure that relevant checks are carried out to identify and flag third-country nationals with security risks including by relying on the screening process as set out in Regulation 2024/1356 of the European Parliament and of the Council<sup>11</sup>. For third-country nationals posing security risks, removal should in general be the rule, and it should be possible to derogate from the general rules in order to provide for longer or indefinite entry bans, longer detention periods and from ■ the use of specialised detention facilities so that those who threaten the security of the Member States are swiftly removed.

- (23) New rules should extend the possibilities for Member States to ensure returns to third countries through additional tools. It should be possible to put in place specific agreements or arrangements with third countries for the purpose of providing Member States with more options for returns subject to the conditions that the international human right standards and, in case of removal, the principle of non-refoulement are respected by the third country concerned. Deficiencies in relation to specific parts of the territory of the third country or to identifiable category of persons do not prevent the conclusions of such an agreement or arrangement, provided that sufficient guarantees are in place to ensure the full respect of the rights of the third country nationals which are concerned by such agreement or arrangement.

In particular, the agreement or arrangement should set out the procedures applicable to the return, the conditions for the stay in the country, the respective obligations and responsibilities of the parties to the agreement or arrangement and the consequences in case of violations of the agreement or arrangement. Where an agreement or an arrangement involves onward return from the third country, the agreement or arrangement should in addition set out the consequences in case onward return is not possible, the respective obligations and responsibilities of the parties to the agreement or arrangement, the consequences of significant changes adversely impacting the situation in the third country, and an independent monitoring body or mechanism to assess the implementation of the agreement or arrangement.

<sup>11</sup> Regulation (EU) 2024/1356 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 14 May 2024 introducing the screening of third-country nationals at the external borders and amending Regulations (EC) No 767/2008, (EU) 2017/2226, (EU) 2018/1240 and (EU) 2019/817 (OJ L 2024/1356, 22.5.2024, ELI: <http://data.europa.eu/eli/reg/2024/1356/oj>).

Such agreements or arrangements will constitute an implementation of Union law for the purposes of Article 51 (1) of the Charter.

(23a) *In order to ensure that the legitimate interests linked to the management of the external borders and the internal security of the Member States concerned are sufficiently protected, in circumstances where a Member State negotiates an agreement or arrangement for the purposes of this Regulation with one of the Union's neighbouring third countries, the Member States that share a common border with that third country should, at an appropriate time before the conclusion of the agreement or arrangement, be informed of those negotiations, in full respect of the principle of sincere cooperation laid down in Article 4(3) of the Treaty on European Union. Upon concluding agreements or arrangements with third countries, Member States should be required to inform the Commission and other Member States of such agreements or arrangements before they are provisionally applied, or enter into force, whichever is the earliest. In addition, in order to avoid any non-compliance with Union law and to further enhance transparency, Member States could, on a voluntary basis, keep the Commission and other Member States informed of the progress of negotiations with a third country relating to agreements or arrangements authorised by this Regulation, before final agreement has been reached by the parties, including with a view to seeking the Commission's assessment as to the compatibility of the envisaged agreement or arrangement under negotiation with Union law.

(24) A well-functioning Schengen area without internal borders relies on the effective and efficient application by the Member States of the relevant acquis. Council Regulation (EU) 2022/922 establishes an evaluation and monitoring mechanism to verify the application of the Schengen acquis ■ , including in relation to the effective return of third-country nationals with no right to stay and the respect of fundamental rights. **■

(25) The best interests of the child should be a primary consideration of Member States when applying return procedures, in accordance with Article 24 of the Charter and the 1989 United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child. In assessing the individual best interests of the child, Member States should, in particular, take due account of the minor's well-being and social development in the short, medium and long term, safety and security considerations and the views of the minor in accordance with his or her age and maturity, including his or her background.

■ Unaccompanied minors should be guided by a representative through all the steps of the return process.

- (26) Where there are grounds for doubting as to whether or not the third-country national is a minor, an age assessment may be carried out in accordance with national law. Member States may rely on age assessments completed under previous procedures. For the purpose of ensuring coherence across migration management in the Union the same procedure as provided for in Regulation (EU) 2024/1348 of the European Parliament and of the Council<sup>12</sup> may be followed. ■
- (27) To reinforce the effectiveness of the return procedure, clear obligations of third-country nationals should be established. Third country-nationals should have the obligation to leave the territory of the Member States and to cooperate with the authorities throughout the return procedure. Third-country nationals should remain available to, and reachable by, the competent authorities and provide any information relevant to preparing and carrying out the return. They should also not obstruct removal either physically or verbally. Verbal obstruction should be of a nature or character that is of greater intensity than mere objection. It follows that it should primarily be the responsibility of the third-country national to establish their identity and to obtain and provide the travel documents necessary for return. In case the obligations to leave and cooperate are not respected, effective, dissuasive and proportionate consequences should be imposed, and competent authorities should take the relevant steps to ensure return, including through investigative measures, if applicable. Third-country nationals who cannot be removed, including due to the principle of non-refoulement or due to their lack of cooperation with the competent authorities, should not be excluded from the imposition of general obligations, including the obligations to remain, reside and report. The consequences in case of non compliance with the obligation to cooperate should include for instance reduced benefits and allowances granted in accordance with national law or seizure of travel documents.

<sup>12</sup> Regulation (EU) 2024/1348 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 14 May 2024 establishing a common procedure for international protection in the Union and repealing Directive 2013/32/EU (OJ L 222, 22.5.2024, p. 1).

- (27a) Nothing in this Regulation affects obligations and measures not related to return or provisions governing social benefits under national law.
- (28) This Regulation should not affect the possibility for Member States to impose, where applicable, criminal sanctions, including imprisonment, in accordance with national criminal law to third-country nationals falling within the scope of this Regulation.
- (29) A set of legal remedies against decisions related to return should be established to guarantee effective protection of the rights of the individuals concerned. The necessary legal aid should be made available, upon request, █ in cases of appeal or review before a court or tribunal without prejudice to the possibility to restrict access to legal assistance and representation.
- (29a) Legal assistance and representation includes the preparation of an appeal or request for review, including the drafting of the procedural documents required under national law and, where a hearing takes place, participation in that hearing before a court or tribunal, in order to ensure the right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial.
- (29b) The notion of court or tribunal is a concept governed by Union law, as interpreted by the Court of Justice of the European Union. That notion, among other elements, can only mean an authority acting as a third party in relation to the authority which adopted the decision forming the subject-matter of the proceedings. That authority should perform judicial functions and it is not decisive whether that authority is recognised as a court or tribunal under national law. This regulation should not affect Member States' competence to organise their national court system and determine the number of instances of appeal. Where national law provides for the possibility to lodge further appeals against a first appeal or subsequent appeals decision, and such an appeal has been lodged, removal should not be suspended unless the third country national requests suspension and a court or tribunal decides to grant it, taking into due account the specific circumstances of the individual case. That should be without prejudice to national law providing for a suspensive effect of such remedies.
- (30) To improve the effectiveness of the return procedures, while ensuring the respect of the right to an effective remedy in accordance with Article 47 of the Charter, appeals against return related decisions should be challenged as far as possible before one judicial level. The rules of this Regulation related to appeals and the suspension of the enforcement of decisions should comply with the right to an effective remedy as provided for in Article 47 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights.

- (30a) Although this Regulation does not provide for automatic suspensive effect of an appeal, Member States should, in full compliance with Article 47 of the Charter, ensure that removal can be suspended by the competent court or tribunal of first instance prior to the enforcement of the return decision or decision ordering removal. A third-country national should be able to submit a request to suspend the enforcement of a return decision or decision ordering removal, unless national law also provides for the possibility of its suspension by the competent court or tribunal ex officio. That is without prejudice to the possibility of Member States providing for automatic suspensive effect of an appeal in their national law. In order to avoid duplication in the assessment of the risk of violating the principle of non-refoulement, reliance should be placed on any material in the file, in particular previous assessments, including, where relevant, those carried out in the context of an asylum procedure.
- (31) Member States should be provided with the necessary tools to ensure a swift and effective return, including measures as consequences of non-compliance and incentives for compliance with the obligations to leave and cooperate, as well as measures to prevent the risk of absconding. Absconding includes actions such as leaving the territory of the Member States without permission from the competent authorities, for reasons that are not beyond the control of the third-country national. Common rules, without restricting the right of Member States to establish additional measures and criteria in national law, should streamline requirements under the obligation to cooperate and the criteria for determining a risk of absconding. Such rules should also ensure that detention and alternatives to detention are applied in Member States to effectively manage the return process.
- (32) It should be possible to impose detention when proportionate and necessary, following an individual assessment of each case ■ only for the purpose of return, including for preparing the return, readmission, or carrying out the removal. The authorities should act with due diligence and detention should be maintained only for as short a period as possible and should generally not exceed 24 months in a given Member State. In cases of absconding to another Member State, previous periods of detention shall not be taken into account when calculating the maximum period of detention. Detention periods under other regulations or directives not concerning the return procedure should not be included in calculating the maximum period of detention. Special needs arising from vulnerability assessment should be addressed during detention. Where national law provides for the detention of minors, the best interests of the child should be a primary consideration. Other less coercive alternative measures to detention should be used when they can be applied effectively to illegally staying third-country nationals.

- (32a) Where detention has been maintained for a period of 24 months, the Member State should have the possibility to detain the third-country national for new periods not exceeding six months in total, where changes in circumstances indicate a reasonable prospect of removal due to new significant information under certain circumstances. The detention should be ordered in respect of the principle of necessity and proportionality and should be maintained for as short a period as possible.
- (33) Returning third-country nationals who pose a security risk requires specific measures aimed at protecting the rights and freedoms of others. It should therefore be possible to detain such third-country nationals for a period longer than 24 months, while any such detention has to comply with the principle of proportionality.
- (34) Third-country nationals in detention should be treated in a humane and dignified manner with respect for their fundamental rights and in compliance with international and national law, taking into account the practical guidelines from the Council of Europe Committee for the prevention of torture and inhuman and degrading treatment. Detention should, as a general rule, take place in specialised detention facilities or dedicated branches of other facilities. Prison accommodation may be resorted to when a Member State cannot provide for such facility, keeping, to the extent possible, the third-country nationals separate from ordinary prisoners. Third-country nationals who pose a security risk may be placed under enhanced security arrangements within detention facilities.
- (35) The grounds for detention set out in this Regulation are without prejudice to other grounds for detention, including detention grounds within the framework of criminal proceedings, which are applicable under national law ■ .

- (36) The obligation of any State to readmit its own nationals represents a fundamental principle of state sovereignty and international cooperation. The duty of States to readmit their own nationals is considered a principle of customary international law and is foreseen by the ICAO convention, Annex IX, Chapter 5, and set out in the Samoa Agreement. Effective returns are only possible if States comply with the obligation to readmit their own nationals. Therefore, Member States depend on the cooperation of third countries to be able to implement effective returns. Existing instruments such as Article 25a of Regulation (EU) 810/2009 and Frontex support are used by the EU and Member States to improve cooperation with third countries where necessary.
- (37) A coordinated approach to readmission among Member States is crucial to facilitate the return of third-country nationals. Insufficient follow up to enforceable return decisions risks hampering the efficiency of the common approach to returns. Enforceable return decisions should be systematically followed by all necessary measures to implement the return, including, where applicable, the submission of readmission requests to third countries' authorities, in cases where nationality is in doubt or a travel document needs to be obtained.
- (39) Effective return procedures rely on efficient administrative cooperation and information sharing between Member States. The exchange of information including the sharing of data on the identity and nationality of the third-country nationals, their travel documents and other relevant information should be based on clear rules, including those set out in Regulation (EU) 2018/1860 of the European Parliament and of the Council<sup>13</sup>. These rules should respect the principles of data protection and the rights of the individual concerned, ensuring that such information is accurate and is only used for the purposes of return, removal, readmission, and reintegration, and is protected against unauthorised access, disclosure, or use.

To the extent that activities should be financed by the Asylum and Migration Fund thematic facility, these may be implemented under the direct, indirect or shared management. Member States should make best use of the available Union financial instruments, programmes and projects in the field of return, in particular under Regulation (EU) 2021/1147 of the European Parliament and of the Council<sup>16</sup>, as well as of the operational assistance by the European Border and Coast Guard Agency according to Regulation (EU) 2019/1896 of the European Parliament and of the Council<sup>17</sup>. ■
